Business Focus

Nexiant is the leading provider of enterprise MRO solutions. Our company offers subscription-based software, professional services and point-of-use (POU) technology. Nexiant solutions help manage MRO inventory to reduce costs, improve asset utilization and increase production worker productivity. We ensure that the right MRO material is in the right place at the right time for industrial supply customers and their customers.

History

Established in 1999 as DispenseSource, the company leveraged its POU dispensing technology successes in the healthcare field to quickly establish the standard for managing MRO materials throughout the manufacturing marketplace. Through the constant development of new products and services offerings, Nexiant has grown to become a leading provider of MRO inventory management solutions. Today, Nexiant is the only provider of true enterprise-wide, cloud-based solutions to manage the end-to-end indirect materials supply-chain. Nexiant is a privately-held company whose investors include The Argentum Group, InnoCal Venture Capital, Inverness Capital Management and Mission Ventures.

Lean MRO Solutions

Nexiant Lean MRO solutions combine patented point-of-use material dispensing cabinets with enterprise level software delivered via a software-as-a-service (SaaS) model. This model replaces costly and labor-intensive, on-site hardware and software with a web-based service delivered via subscription. The architecture of the Nexiant solution allows integration to manufacturers' ERP, procurement and maintenance management systems as well as to the order management systems used by Nexiant's industrial distribution partners, thereby supporting complete supply chain collaboration. The result is immediate transmission of demand signals, integration of information, and timely, automated replenishment, resulting in significant reduction in inventory and labor costs.

Partners and Customers

Nexiant sells exclusively through a small number of strategic industrial distribution and supply partners. Together with our partners, we have established and support a large base of customers throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico that range from specialist manufacturers to globally renowned product and service companies.
